anything at all, how, these questions first to put before us time and again, but as yet, there can be only no definite way. The present opinions vary from neutrality, isolationism between East and West, to nationalism, or the mere intent to live over the catastrophes which seemingly cannot be avoided. Neutrality and isolationism can be put into effect only if there is enough power to prevent anyone from violating it. As long as we have no power, neutrality and isolation only aid Communism and encourage it to increase its hold over the West. Nationalism and the principle of national states are ideas of a past period. They are out dated since the United States and Soviet Russia have created political units covering whole continents. Only a free, united, strong, Europe could as a 'third power,' reach such a factor which by its mere existence could guarantee peace and relieve the United States as well as the Soviet Union of their fear of one another in Europe. If the bulk of Europe is united there will be no political unit making a prosperous life possible for all European people. At the same time, it would in the gap of war put its own weight on the side of those who defend freedom and light. The unification of Europe must be based on the idea that Europe is an organism and not a mere collection of loose parts. Humanity is all that a man is made of, not a living body with no regard to order, a mechanical organism in which each part has its duties, in its place and at its special time, all of which is an irreplaceable factor. No organism cannot live unless each little part does its job in its place and at the right time, no part can live outside of the organism.

Human beings mean the freedom of each individual, not only to satisfy himself, but rather due to the fact that possessing the individual holds up no more to contribute his share of work necessary to keep the whole organism healthy. This is the basic principle of organic philosophy which says that man, a being with reason, conscience, and free will, is different from all other living things on earth, and that he alone has a freedom which makes certain moral actions possible. The opposite of this philosophy is the other mechanical interpretation which holds that the world is but a sum of atoms and development on earth is the result of completely senseless processes and natural selection on the part of these atoms. The organic philosophy has created individualism, the idea of the new world, and mechanical philosophy has created collectivism, the idea of the East. Both seem to be completely different from each other, and at first are on the sides of the same coin, both go back to the society of the French Revolution, where it was thought that humanity is merely a sum of single individuals or so-called atoms of reason, and that history or politics is nothing but the sum of the actions of these atoms guided by opportunism. Their slogan was, 'The same to all.' This mechanical philosophy of the mechanical philosophy was necessary because we Europeans cannot tolerate organic individualism or collectivism which are both not compatible with our philosophy. We must create a thinking to outweigh these two philosophies. In this short sketch, the proof for my

... We listed as follows: politically, complete political and other
... restricted within the boundaries of the Western Federal
... in Germany, a subject which existed on 31 December 1947 must be ... restored. Economically, Germany must be completely autonomous in all eco... nomic respects. Disarmament must be stopped. Free trade with all
... countries and on all oceans must be permitted, especially with the Western
... nations. There should be no restrictions imposed on the exchange of cur... rency, exports, or imports. Militarily, the power of the German soldier must ... be restored and all consequences resulting from such restoration of power be ... adjusted, economically and morally. The so-called May Crisis trials must ... be stopped and those not guilty of crimes must be rehabilitated. A guarantee
... must be given that the territory between the Iron Curtain and the Rhine River
... will be defended and not given up in case of a Soviet invasion. This guaran... tee should be extended eventually even further east than the Iron Curtain.
... There should be a complete German force within the Army of the European Union.
... This force must be completely obedient to the requirements of modern warfare,
... but it must be strong enough in size to guarantee adequate defense. It is
... our best bet that we not volunteer to be asked, as we should not until we ... have our feet fixed with us, lest anyone think that we want to bring back mili-

... more efficiently, the government of the German Reich must be given the ... necessary machinery to use the potential energy still latent within the German ... people in order for us, politically and economically, a chance to survive.
... We must support the German Federal Government as the only true representative ... of the German nation, regardless of the fact that we might not favor all of ... its policies, personalities. At the present time, there is no sense in private
... talks of single individuals with members of the West European nations, as ... long as long as the Germans are treated as captives. Our honor and self-
... respect must prevent us from offering our services as cheap hirelings. We ... are well aware of our value. We Germans are still fighting among ourselves
... instead of fixing the foe that threatens to break. The foe that threatens
... our lives is Bolshevism. We must unite regardless of political differences
... or League (Bourgeois and Socialist), religious, original citizens, former
... Nazis, or underground fighters, for all there should only be one question,
... Are you for us or for Communism? Anyone supporting Communism is our enemy.
... Those who are against Communism are our allies. We are not interested who
... one or the other is against Communism. We are only interested in the fight
... and in the overall goal. To fight Communism is not a defense, it is an ... attack. We do not just have to believe in Communism, we must have a con-

... effective idea of our day. This writing factor must be, I am sure European ... nation. This idea will give new impetus to the war generation as well as ... to the youth who probably have no political ideas. They must be taught to
... and led to understand the importance of this idea. These statements are to ... be a stimulus. Something must be done, in spite of the danger of making
... mistakes.
